It's that time of year when wine writers declare The Perfect Bubbly for the Holidays. This year, we'd like to throw you a bit of a curveball.

When many people think of rosé bubbly, they think of weddings, Valentine's Day, romance. Partly it's because the wines are such a lovely pink color, albeit 50 shades of red or more. But we think it's also because rosé bubbly is often soft and enticing, seemingly made for quiet toasts and intimate settings.

In U.S. bubbly, we've long been fans of Domaine Carneros, the Napa outpost of Champagne Taittinger that recently-retired winemaker and CEO Eileen Crane built. (Its Ultra Brut is stunning if you can find it and its Brut Rosé and Le Rêve Rosé are excellent, too.)
