

Forbes

Dining

Wines For Late Winter And Maybe An Early Spring

John Mariani | Mar 3, 2021

So, even Texas got gob-smacked with a slap of winter this year. But it seems if things are mellowing, maybe, just maybe the snowstorms have ceased, and it's time to think about drinking some new wines that come with warmer temperatures. Here are a few I'm enjoying.

Consorzio di Tutela

PROSECCO SUPERIORE
DAL 1876

Carpénè Malvotti Conegliano Valdobbiadene Prosecco Superiore n.v. ($19)

I've been drinking a good deal of Prosecco, some very good, some mediocre, and this one from the superior Valdobbiadene region, where acreage is now sky-high in price, is one of the best for the amount of flavor without sweetness, marked "very dry." I sip it before dinner with just about everything from Ritz crackers to foie gras and am never disappointed, and everyone likes it when I pop the cork on this sparkler.

CHARLES COMMUNICATIONS
ASSOCIATES, LLC